Chapter 1 by Pencil

I wrote a draft

Chapter 2 by awesomesauce

It was short and simple.

Chapter 3 by Pencil

It was perfect yet I found it too short

Chapter 4 by Nate

So then I wrote a longer one that was very long

You:Doing fine myself

You: anything interesting happen lately?

Other person:No not really

Other person:Hbu?

You: No not really

Chapter 5 by Hop

So a draft Long yet simple was formed
The simplicity of my draft
I deteste

Chapter 6 by Pencil

Thus what a short and simple draft become a long and complicated draft.
It went like this

I used an over used and meaningless word called "hi" to greet an another fellow being of cells
My compatriate in his attempt to stay original, used a five letter variant of my "hello" it was called "hi".
I wanted to ensure his atoms weren't damaged so I made use of a phrase with 3 words. "How are you "
He (a male being) confirmed his excellent state of healthy cells with "good"
He then reversed my question to myself by replacing the middle word of my sentence with a 4 letter word named "about"
I wanted to be original, so I used a 4 word phrase replacement to his 4 letter word."I'm fine,myself"
I then asked him whether anything which triggered his brain to respond strongly occurred"
He answered with a hint of suspicion , a mysterious 3 letter phrase, "no.not really"
He again reversed my question, through his signature phrase "how about you "
I used his own suspicious phrase against him."No not really"

My raw draft still remained on my desk.

Overwhelmingly simple , so short and yet it called out to me.

It had something,my perfection doesn't

That something...my writing never realized...

Chapter 8 by wizards&whales   ✎

It needed a "The End". Right at the end. So I decided to write "The End"at the end in large green letters. The letters said "The End".

the end
